✦ A Very Merry Christmas To Everyone ✦

A Savior Is Born

Now it came to pass in those days, that a decree went forth from Caesar Augustus that a census of the whole world should be taken. This first census took place while Cyrenus was governor of Syria. And all were going, each to his own town, to register.

And Joseph also went from Galilee out of the town of Nazareth into Judea to the town of David, which is called Bethlehem, being of the family and house of David, to register together with Mary his espoused wife who was with child.

And it came to pass while they were there, that the days for her to be delivered were fulfilled. And she brought forth her first born son, wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were shepherds in the same district living in the fields and keeping watch over their flocks by night. And behold, an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of God shone about them and they feared exceedingly.

And the angel said unto them.

"Do not be afraid, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy which shall be to all the people, for today, in the town of David, a Savior has been born to you who is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign to you; you will find an infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men." The Gospel according to St. Luke.

Greetings
of the Season.

Bridal Showers For Gayle Vincent

(Pincher Creek Echo)

A popular December bride-elect, Miss Gayle Vincent was honored at two showers over the week-end.

Approximately seventy ladies assembled at the Coleman Elks hall on Friday evening, November 27. On entering, corsages of pink carnations were presented to Gayle's mother, Mrs. Frank Vincent, and Mrs. Jim Walker of Stettler, the groom's mother.

Mrs. G. Dundas had charge of the guest book, and the evening was spent playing bingo and whist.

During the shower Mrs. L. Vasek, on behalf of the ladies assembled, presented Gayle with numerous gifts. The hostesses' gift was a set of stainless cookware.

On Saturday evening in the Pincher Creek United Church hall the theme "school days" was carried through in honor of Gayle's forthcoming marriage. About sixty ladies attended with Mrs. H. J. B. Warren of Lundbreck in charge of the guest book.

Guests seated at the head table with Gayle included her mother, the groom's mother and his sister, Miss Doreen Walker of Calgary. Entertainment took the form of a skit presented by some of the hostesses, and several quiz games.

Mrs. Gordon Carlson, on behalf of the gathering, presented the wide array of gifts, and the bride-to-be was assisted in their opening by Miss Walker.

Gayle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vincent will be married to Mr. Greg Walker of Stettler on December 26th in the Pincher Creek United Church.

The new General Motors plant for the manufacture of upholstery trim now under construction at Windsor will employ 1750 people at capacity.

Eve's Christmas

EVE ANDERSON pointed an accusing finger at Stewart Winthrop. "After fifteen years, you have the nerve to do something like this to me. Fifteen years of my life have gone into the building of the public image Winthrop enjoys. Fifteen years, and now you give me a Christmas present. You fire me. Thanks a lot, Mr. Winthrop, thanks very much!"

"You know darn well I am not a purchasing agent," she said.

Stewart Winthrop winced. He hadn't expected such an outcry. "Now, Eve, don't misinterpret things. I said that you were going to be put on a consulting basis. Your salary goes on. So do your company benefits. But you aren't getting any younger. You need time to do things, take yourself a vacation. Travel around the world. You can afford it. Combine business, if you wish. Find some new fashions for us in Europe. Buy whatever you like and send it here to us."

"You know darn well I am not a purchasing agent. My life has been devoted to advertising and public relations."

"And you are one of the best." "Grant's would hire me tomorrow."

"I know."

"So would a dozen other stores."

Not Alone

Caleb Jones coughed and the two suddenly remembered that they weren't alone, but in the austere presence of Winthrop's board of directors.

But, Eve refused to give up the fight. "It isn't a question of where my heart belongs. It's a question of fairness, and right and wrong. Every man on this board knows what you are trying to do, Stewart Winthrop." She stood up, looked them in the eye, one by one, and sat down again. "And, I don't think they should let you get away with it!"

Silas Tweed shrugged. "After all, Eve, all's fair..."

Caleb Jones stopped him. "I don't know about that, Silas. It may be a question of whether or not the end justifies the means. That's questionable here. Eve just might quit us for another store now, and I wouldn't blame her."

Question

Stewart Winthrop raised up in his chair. "Stop all this silly talk. You all know better. She wouldn't stoop so low. She couldn't. You all know it." He settled back in his chair. "Am I not right, Eve?"

"You're wrong. I could, and I would."

"In spite of everything?"

"In spite of anything."

"In that case, you..."

"You can't fire me. I quit."

"You are making fun of me, Eve. I don't appreciate that."

"I am not making fun of you. You are perhaps the most charming, clever man I have ever known. You..."

"You just don't happen to love me."

"I have never made such a statement."

"You've never led me to believe otherwise. Even the stock boys know I made a fool of myself over you for years. I've done everything but stand up and shout that I love you."

"You've never even said it."

Stewart Winthrop turned to the board secretary. "Duly record this statement in the minutes of this meeting. Eve Anderson. I love you. Got that?"

The secretary blushed. "Yes, sir."

Add more

Stewart smiled. "Now, add this: My only motive is getting you out of the store was to convince you that there are other things in life. Six months would have been enough. Besides, I had planned to follow you to Europe and court you until you decided to marry me. It didn't work. O.K. It's all over."

Eve laughed. "Indeed it is. Gentlemen, will you entertain a motion? All those in favor of a Christmas wedding say 'aye.'" A thunder of 'aye's. "Now, gentlemen, pardon me. I must see the latest fashions in wedding gowns." She went through the door to a round of applause.

LITTLE WINKIE

PEGGY RAPPED on the dishpan with the broken broom handle. "Hold it, everybody. Hold it!"

They held it, Jimmy droning on in his almost-bass monotone and Susan creaking soprano as creaky as ever.

Peggy rapped again. "I didn't mean hold the note. I meant to be quiet. Everybody's off-key. Jimmy, Susan, Ann, Billie, all of you. Settle down and let's practice right or we'll never be ready for Christmas caroling tomorrow night. Come on, now, quiet the clowning, please."

Jimmy stopped abruptly. "O.K. We'll quit the clowning. But, let's rest a minute. And, let's be serious. In fact, let's have a meeting. Meeting is called to order. First order of business: the case of one Winkie, male, U.S. citizen, nine years old. Charge: wishes to become a member of the Montrose Valley Carol Club. Fact No. 1—too young, too young; fact No. 2—can't sing, can't sing; fact...

Disgust

Peggy threw her broom handle aside in disgust. "Stop it, Jimmy, will you? We've been all through this before. We've got nothing against Winkie, you know that. But the rules do say that a member has to be at least twelve years old and be able to at least carry a tune. Winkie doesn't qualify in either category. Why don't you just forget it?"

"I'm a crusader, that's why," Jimmy said. He retrieved the broom handle, stuck it in his belt, sword-fashion and struck the pose of a cavalier. "I cannot bear to see injustice, particularly during the happy holiday season. I will fight to the right of this young lad to join the carolers, to stand in their midst and be recognized, albeit he is acknowledged no budding Caruso." He, too, tossed the broom handle aside. "Now, I ask you, all of you. What harm can it do? Where is your Christmas spirit?"

"We have the Christmas spirit," Ann challenged. "What do you think we are practicing these carols for?"

Spotlight

"Ha," Jimmy responded. "You're here, all of you, because you like the spotlight. You think you're somebody when folks come to their doors to listen to your song and when they invite you in for a cup of hot chocolate. It's great— you're in the spotlight. Don't get me wrong. I like it, too. But, I think we're being pretty snooty. Little Winkie is the only kid in the neighborhood old enough to walk that isn't in this carol club. If he had a voice like a bullfrog, and would drown out the rest of us, I'd say keep him out. But, all he wants is to tag along, just to be part of the group. I'd say we had made a good start toward a happy Christmas if we let him."

Outside the garage door, little Winkie bustled himself making a snowman.

Welcome

And then, they were all in the garage doorway, beckoning. He ran toward them and was resoundingly welcomed. They appeared gay, laughing and shouting. He couldn't hear what Jimmy said, but he knew it meant he had been accepted.

Christmas Eve and happy carolers made their rounds, everywhere happily welcomed and received. Winkie kept the honorific spot—out front—and his eyes rolled happily as he attempted to imitate every movement and posture of the other singers.

The singing seemed to improve, house to house, and when the last carol was sung, the town mayor invited all the children in for hot chocolate and cookies, and when they had finished eating, a round of carols concluded the evening.

As they filed through the doorway, the mayor thanked each personally, and each returned the thanks, except Winkie. Winkie smiled. The mayor, a man accustomed to each night counting his blessings, later remarked to his wife that little Winkie exuded a great amount of charm and personality for a lad born without the ability to speak a single word.

CHRISTMAS - 1964

The Wonder of the Nativity.
"There was no place for them in the inn."—(Luke 2:7).

As each Christmas season comes around, Christian people linger with wistful regret upon the pathos of the words, "And Mary gave birth to her first-born Son, and laid Him in a manger, because there was no place for them in the inn."

Ah, we say, if only the merchantmen and the women at the Inn had known, surely they would have made room for the Mother and her Child; but they did not know. How could they know?

"God sounds no bell when He draws near."

As silently as one snowflake among many from a leaden sky, did the new Life that was to transfigure all things in heaven and earth, come among men; and behold, there was neither pity nor welcome. The world, not knowing, was simply its busy, heedless, hard-hearted self, and God's test of judgment came in an hour unlooked for.

Would it be any different, do you think, if the Christ were born today? If God's gift came as a little Child again, would there be room for Him in our best Inn? I wonder whether we are any readier with our welcome and our offer of house room than the traders in the Inn were when He first came?

How The World Receives Him

There are the elaborate Christmas festivals in every land, did the new Life that was to transfigure all things in heaven and earth, come among men; and behold, there was neither pity nor welcome. The world, not knowing, was simply its busy, heedless, hard-hearted self, and God's test of judgment came in an hour unlooked for.

The Son of man Who "had no where to lay His head" solicits a room in our inmost hearts, a personal faith above all credal statements, a passionate love for all that belongs to Him and His way of Life; this is the core of the whole matter of His reception.

The crowded Inn at Bethlehem is symbolic. He came unto His own, but His own received Him not. The proud world yet takes little account of the coming of the Holy Child.

How We Can Make Room

The Child Jesus is coming to the world of today in a different way from that in which He came before. God reveals Himself in many ways. Still it is in the image of a little Child, feeble and helpless, and without any outward marks of divinity—a Child Who represents the great world of human need. Our social horizon has greatly widened. We are alive to the rights of others, to the Christian spirit being put into services of compassion and helplessness to the hungry and afflicted, the poor and the friendless. We make room for Him by sharing of our bounty, the unselfish giving of ourselves, in love. It may well be that some of these who need help and cheer are in our own neighborhood, and will welcome our visit. Or perchance at this Christmas season we can make room for a new understanding of those from whom we have been separated by bitter feelings and grudges.

If we can take the first step towards reconciliation and renewal of the old friendship, the happy days will take on greater meaning.

It may well be that now when hearts are open upon the path by which God's angels come, there will come an uneasy sense that we have slipped from our allegiance to the Christ appeal, and are allowing the material things of life to overshadow our interest in the causes of God. Should this anniversary of His coming recall for any this sense of failure, and a questing for new loyalty to Him, tell Him so, humbly and penitently, for "He stands at the door and knocks."

It was with this in mind that Isaac Watts would have us sing in his noted hymn:

Joy to the world; the Lord is come;

Let earth receive her King;
Let every heart prepare Him

room,
And heaven and nature sing.
—Amen.

THE JOY OF CHRISTMAS

As Christmas comes upon us once again we should devote some attention to the worthy celebration of this great feast. In order to do this three elements are necessary. First, let your Christmas be, above all, a religious feast. Celebrate it by attending Church services, by meditating on the meaning for us of the birth of Jesus and by imitating His example. To by observing the religious character of Christmas we will draw away from the profane and unedifying society that surrounds us; we will then understand the meaning of the crib scene and of its humble and sublime thoughts regarding such a great mystery.

Secondly, let your Christmas be a family feast. Renew your affection for your nearest and dearest, show them fidelity to your family, tell them of our inmost love and benediction.

The third element is to "remember the poor, assist them, make sacrifices for them, and give them your aid in the name of Our Lord and for His sake Who 'being rich, He became poor for your sakes, that by His poverty you might become rich'."

If we put these three elements into our Christmas and its celebrations then we will truly have a Very Merry Christmas — and this is what I wish to all: "A Very Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year of Peace and Happiness."

Rev. W. J. Krewski,
Holy Ghost Catholic Church,
Coleman, Alberta.

Christmas Party Much Enjoyed

On the evening of December 3rd the Senior Ladies' Group of St. Paul's United Church held their annual Christmas party with approximately 117 members and guests in attendance. An hour's singing of Christmas hymns, accompanied by Mrs. Skoye as pianist was enjoyed. Mrs. Jack Rogers gave the welcoming address.

Games and contests then took place, prizes going to Mrs. Alf Phillips and Mrs. Jack Kerr for the imitating contest. Mrs. T. Holstad won the guessing contest and Mrs. E. West Montalbetti won the drawing contest.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostesses, after which the exchange of gifts took place.

Elks Hold Memorial Service

Well attended BPOE and OORP Memorial Services were held in the Coleman Elks hall Sunday afternoon, December 6th, when respects were paid to deceased members of both Lodges.

The Memorial Address was given by Exalted Ruler Robert 'Bob' Zak, after which Honored Royal Lady Mrs. R. Kulig gave a short talk. Following the prayer service, two vocal solos were sung by Mrs. A. K. Opina, after which the Royal Purple drill team did a ceremonial march.

Lunch served by the Ladies of the Royal Purple concluded the annual event.

Pythian Sisters Hold Whist Drive

An enjoyable whist drive was held in the I.O.O.F. hall on December 9th. Honors went to:

Ladies first, Mrs. J. Slopak of Blainville; second, Mrs. Amy Penney and consolation to Mrs. Mary Morris. Gentlemen first, Mr. Art Williams of Blainville; second, Mrs. Debora McDonald of Blainville, and consolation to Mrs. Rose Lant.

Prizes on the Pay as You Pull tickets then were awarded:

First prize of $25, won by Mrs. Janet Bayon of Lethbridge; second of $10 to Mrs. Mary Ball of Coleman; third of $5 to Mrs. Paul Rempe of Lethbridge.

TB Christmas Seal Campaign Notes

Contributions in the second week of the Christmas Seal campaign are slightly under the same period last year, according to Mr. Gale Harris, chairman of the Kinsmen Club of Lethbridge TB Christmas Seal Campaign Committee.

Mr. Harris said "Our objective is $27,000 and we have received $10,889 to date. Follow-up Cards are now in the mail and we hope these timely little cards will serve as reminders to our friends who have overlooked mailing in their contributions."

Mr. James M. Wallace, Lethbridge, a director of the Alberta Tuberculosis Association, reports receipts for the province at $111,101 which is 49 per cent of the provincial objective of $225,600.

In expressing his views the Hon. Lt. J. Donovan Ross, Minister of Health for the province of Alberta, said "I have been closely interested in the work of your Association and have, at all times, been prepared to heartily endorse the effective contribution that is being made by your Association in the field of tuberculosis, and to request the support of our people in Alberta generally towards your Christmas Seal campaign, in order that you may further your work. I trust that your campaign will be a successful one as it has been in the past years."

Contributions may be sent to the Kinsmen Club of Lethbridge TB Christmas Seal Campaign Committee, Box 52, Lethbridge, Alberta.

An obstinate man does not hold opinions, they hold him.

May the Season's friendly cheer,
Fill your heart with abounding joy
To last throughout the coming New Year.

TV TALK

Seasonal programs throughout the week wish viewers a happy and holy Christmas from the CBC-TV network.

A purely delightful treat is in store for young and old alike, on Sunday, December 20th at 2:15 p.m. (1:15 p.m. in Alberta). It's the March of the Wooden Soldiers—a Christmas film feature starring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

San and Ollie, as bumbling toy-makers, in Santa's workshop, aim to rid toyland of a villainous character who is trying to evict Little Bo Peep's mother. What a cad!

Possibly the major entertainment offering of the holiday season is the Show of the Week's presentation of "Mr. Scrooge", an original musical, written for television and based on A Christmas Carol by Charles Dickens. "Mr. Scrooge" stars Cyril Richard as Scrooge, Tessa O'Shea as Mrs. Cratchit and Alfie Bass as Bob Cratchit. The cast also includes Neil Cullen (as Tiny Tim), Elizabeth Cole, Eric Christmas, Gillie Fenwick, Don Franks and Bill Van.

The musical "Mr. Scrooge" will be seen Monday, December 21st at 8 p.m.

On Other Voices, Tuesday, December 22nd at 10:30 p.m., Don Franks expresses his sentiments about the season and sings some of his favorite Christmas songs.

Christmas Eve, beginning at 11:30 p.m., on Christmas Vigil, there will be readings from the Bible and Christmas carols sung by the choir of St. Michael's Cathedral in Toronto.

The holiday programs Christmas Day are too numerous to preview completely, but the following should be of special interest at those times between attending church, opening presents and eating turkey.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth will be heard in her annual Christmas message to the Commonwealth Christmas morning at 10 a.m. In addition, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet will deliver addresses to Canadian viewers.

Winnipeg's contribution to Christmas day programming will be "In the Path of the Star", a half-hour re-telling of the Christmas story in words and song. A group of present-day pilgrims, on the way to Bethlehem for Christmas 1964, pause to reflect on the journeys along the same road at the time of the first Christmas. Mezzo soprano Florence Peters and baritone Roy Petty will be featured in the production Christmas morning at 10:30.

There are afternoon choral programs bringing back the groups who were so popular during the past summer. At 4:00 the Jubilee Singers from Halifax will get together for a Christmas Singalong. Featured will be singing host Bill Langstroth, guitarist and singer Fred McKenna, soprano Catherine McKenna and the Don Burke Four.

Across the country on the Pacific shore, Carols Anyone? will present the soloists and chorists from the Chorus Anyone? summer series. There'll be solos by Jan Rubes, Bernard Turgeon and Eric Prentice. John Avison will conduct the male chorus, with accompaniment by Hugh McLean on the console organ. Carols Anyone? is scheduled for 5:30 p.m.

A Christmas adventure entitled "Music in the Night" will be seen on Festival at 8:30 p.m. The story, set to music, concerns a little girl who can't sleep Christmas night after her exciting day so she follows a street band. She encounters a lonely tramp and together they wander through the night in search of Christmas adventure.

Denise Pidgeon and Guy Hoffman play the leading roles. Others include Lois Smith and Earl Kraut of the National Ballet Company, cellist Walter Joachim, soprano Loro Farrell and a boys' choir called La Maitrise du Chapitre de Quebec.

At 10 p.m. Christmas night CBC Newsmagazine will show a special report on this year's man of peace, Martin Luther King. It was filmed at Dr. King's home in Atlanta, Georgia, and at the presentation ceremonies of his Nobel Peace Prize in Stockholm, Sweden.

And a "Merry Christmas" to you for the management and staff of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Christmas Message
1964, From The
Hon. E. C. Manning

For over 20 years it has been my privilege, on behalf of the Government of Alberta, to convey Christmas greetings to the citizens of this province on this important day. I welcome the opportunity to wish each of you God's richest blessing and every happiness again this Christmas.

This is a joyous season, a time when we all delight to observe the young as they gaze with eyes aglow upon the Christmas tree in all its finery and thrill at the pleasure they display as they open their gifts. Those of us who are further along the path of life have many fond memories of that same era, but at the same time, our thoughts are sobered by the knowledge that there are many places in this world where anxiety and uncertainty over-ride the joys of Christmas and obscure the events which almost 2,000 years ago heralded the birth of Christ.

No words can enhance the message voiced by the heavenly choirs when they announced the coming of the Prince of Peace on the world's first Christmas Eve. That message of peace on earth, goodwill towards men, has re-echoed down the centuries ever since.

Notwithstanding our human failures the fact remains that the central figure of the Christmas season still offers to mankind the one sure and blessed hope of true peace and goodwill in this troubled world. It rests with individuals and nations to decide whether they will accept His solutions to our human problems or whether we will struggle on in failure by ourselves.

We, in this province and nation, who have so much for which to be thankful, should be mindful especially of those less fortunate than ourselves as we pause at this season to return thanks to God for His goodness to us and His concern for all mankind.

On behalf of all members of the Government, I extend sincere good wishes to each of you for a very joyous Christmas and a happy and purposeful New Year.

Christmas At The Club

"YOU'RE A BUNCH of silly old fools, and that's my honest opinion," Ben Addams flicked his half-used cigar unerringly toward the corner cuspidor.

A moment of sudden silence enveloped the Park City Men's Club. Some twenty men were silent as church mice. Ben Addams was the eldest man in the room, indeed, he had founded the club for retired businessmen. Years ago, he stepped aside to let younger men run the show and this was the first such comment he had made in five years.

John Wheeler, in the golden voice that had soothed many a jury box, spoke up. "Now, Ben, what's so silly about it? Not a man here had any plans for Christmas. I asked you myself, and you said you weren't planning to do a thing. What's wrong with us having a little party?"

John Wheeler spoke up. "Now, Ben, what's so silly about it?"

Not Pleased

Ben Addams answered without looking up from the new cigar he was lighting. "Passing out presents like a bunch of school kids. Even with a Santa Claus, too. You know I don't believe in this tomfoolery. Not a man here under 75 and you're acting like this kiddie-land."

Wheeler turned his head to cough, effectively hiding a smile that turned the corners of his mouth. "Maybe we're due a second childhood, Ben. Indulge us, if you will. Maybe the spirit of Christmas will do us all some good."

Agreed

Ben Addams threw another half-used cigar away. "Very well, gentlemen. I'll go along with your little game. But, don't think you'll rope me in on a birthday party next week, or a 'welcome to spring' celebration. And, if you have any such plans for next Christmas, count me out. I have more important things to do."

John Wheeler, with the look of an apprentice lawyer who had just won a case before the Supreme Court, rose from his chair, and ceremoniously clasped his hands. "Thank you, Ben. We do appreciate your decision to join us. And now, Gentlemen, shall we relax? Santa will be here soon."

It was a signal. Santa appeared, followed by a timid, bashful collection of youngsters. Ben Addams sat upright. The children ranged in age from two years to twelve or so. They were neatly dressed, obviously fresh-washed—and Ben knew every one of them. They represented some of the really unfortunate families in the community.

They gathered about the tree and a small girl stepped forward, then posed, motionlessly, her speech suddenly forgotten. "Merry Christmas," prompted Santa.

The wee one smiled. "Merry Christmas, Mr. Addams. Merry Christmas, gentlemen. We have only a song to offer, but it comes from our hearts and with the wish... with the wish... that the spirit of Christmas remain with you always."

Fade Out

All too soon, it seemed, the song was ended. The members of the Park City Men's Club applauded roundly as the youngsters bowed, then disappeared the way they had come. When once again the house was still, John Wheeler pointed to an empty chair. Ben Addams was gone, too.

Outside, it was snowing ever so softly. Officer Pat McGinty leaned on the side of the black limousine. "Evening, Dwight."

"Hi, Pat. How's things?"

"Quiet as Christmas Eve. Waiting for the boss to come from the club."

"He's taking a walk. Didn't stay at the club long."

"Maybe he is out delivering baskets this year. Funny thing to me he thinks he can send baskets to needy families for twenty years by taxicab and never realize curious folks are gonna find who's paying the taxi bill. He should know better."

"I think he does, Pat. Look in the back seat. We're delivering baskets personally this year."

THE TRAIN rattled across the Elkhorn Creek bridge and Woody Hansen casually noted that the creek was frozen solid, bank to bank. Like Anna has written, they had suffered a real spell of old weather around Grandview. It always turned cold at Christmas.

He took his bag from the overhead rack and sat down with it in his lap. Five more minutes and the train would be at the station.

Together they walked through the station and across the square.

She stood there on the platform, proud and straight, oblivious of the snow that swirled about her, unashamed of the tears of joy that strained down her face. Billy stood beside her, tall for his age, just as proud and straight.

"Welcome home, Woodrow. We've missed you very much."

And she was in his arms.

After a moment, he turned to his son. "Billy."

"Welcome home, dad. I've missed you, too."

They walked through the station and across the square.

The house looked the same, except inside. It had been recently painted. "In honor of your home coming, dad," Billy pointed out.

"I'm sure of it, son. Now, how about sitting down. I'd like to talk to you for a minute."

Anna put an arm around each of them. "You men can talk while you trim the Christmas tree. It's on the back porch. Will you get it, Billy?"

"Sure, mom." He paused in the doorway. "You don't have to tell me anything, dad. Mom has already told me. I know you never stole anything from old Mr. Smith and I know somehow we'll prove you're O.K. Let's have a good Christmas."

"O.K. Now fetch the tree like a good boy."

Visitors

A few neighbors dropped by in the next couple of days. Long-time friends, old schoolmates. They brought Christmas gifts. They were friendly, yet Woody saw in their eyes the things Anna had written about. Woody found himself thinking more and more that it would always be like this and he didn't like the idea at all. He felt even worse when the phone rang on the afternoon before Christmas. "Woody? Sheriff Cranston. I have something important to talk to you about. I can't get away from the office. Can you get up here in an hour?"

There were four men in the office, Sheriff Cranston, Mr. Wellington Smith, his gunman employer, and Dan Bailey, editor of the Grandview Gazette. These were solemn men, indeed. At least, Woody thought, they aren't hypocrites.

Dan Bailey spoke first. "Woody, there's a story about you on the front page of the Gazette. It won't be on the streets until tomorrow morning. But we thought you might like to have a copy before then."

Christmas Morn

Billy Hansen was first down the stairs come Christmas morning. He passed up the many gaily wrapped packages and picked up the copy of the Grandview Gazette which had been carefully placed among his gifts.

He began to read the story headlined "Christmas Gift." It began: "Police in nearby Winchester have reported that a gunman seriously wounded in an attempted filling station holdup has made a bedside confession admitting a series of robberies in the tri-county area, including, they say, holdup of Smith's Service, Grandview, three years ago. A respected local citizen, Woodrow Hansen, manager of the station, was convicted of the crime. The amount taken in the robbery was $2,000. Investigators found that Hansen had purchased a car earlier that day for cash, paying $1,950. He was unable to account for the money, other than to say that he had saved it, in cash, to buy his family the new car for Christmas. Sheriff Cranston said it is his belief that further investigation will completely clear Hansen."

Later in the day, much later, the Hansens opened their gaily-wrapped Christmas presents—and paid host to the good citizens of Grandview.

the BRIGHT
RED WAGON

SARA FOSTER leaned through the doorway and for a moment watched her husband intently putting the final touches on a wool carving.

"Supper's ready, Sam."

"Be there in a moment," the man said, setting his work aside. He turned his wheel chair around to face her, but she had disappeared into the kitchen again.

"Where's the boy?" he asked.

"In his room asleep. I let him in the yard a while this afternoon after the snow fell and he was all tucked out."

Sam didn't say anything. He was glad Timothy was sleeping. Somehow, the boy never thought to ask about the bright red wagon until the supper hour. And, he never had the courage to tell the lad that he had made a foolish promise and there was no more possibility of a red wagon for Christmas than there was that the temperature would reach a hundred degrees on Christmas day.

He maneuvered his chair into the kitchen, gave a short "thanks" and quietly plunged into the plate of greens and pork. He hoped Sara wouldn't say anything about the wagon, either.

Young Timmie busied himself with a crossword puzzle.

Someday, maybe, he'd learn to keep his big mouth shut. Maybe someday. Three years now, since he had lost his legs in a mining accident, he hadn't changed a bit. Still making promises almost impossible to keep.

The morning before Christmas dawned bright and clear. In the late afternoon, it began to snow and Sara Foster hummed a Christmas tune as she went about her kitchen chores. The old red rooster, long a family friend, was dropped into the boiling pot and she set about the making of dumplings.

Young Timmie busied himself on the cabin floor, meticulously fitting together the pieces of a wooden jig saw puzzle.

Sam Foster sat by the window, gazing idly across the hills and valleys. "Sara, come here," he called.

She stood by his side and he pointed in the direction of the Valley Road. "There's a car in trouble down there. I saw it slip off the road into the ditch. Someone may be hurt. I think you should go see."

Wrapping herself in Sam's old Army coat and tossing a kerchief across her head, the woman opened the door, letting in a blast of cold air and a small snow flurry. "Watch the things on the stove for me, Sam. I shouldn't be long."

Watching

Sam Foster spent the next hour or so wheeling himself back and forth between the kitchen and the front window. He saw his wife trudge back up the hill out, instead of coming into the cabin she went into the barn, emerging a few moments later with Big Red, the tired old mule, and then the return trip down the hill.

It was well after dark when Sara Foster entered the cabin.

Sam was finishing the task of setting plates around the kitchen table. "I imagine, since you didn't say so earlier, no one was hurt. If not, why didn't the fellow you helped come up after that mule himself?"

"Wasn't a fella. Was a woman. A grandma. She wasn't hurt; just slipped off the road. I put her back on her way again. She wanted to pay me, but I didn't take any money."

Sam looked at her curiously. "Your time and work was worth something."

Sara smiled. "Indeed it was. It was worth very much." She leaned low to whisper in her husband's ear. "She had a bright red wagon in her car. Was taking it to her grandchildren. I took that as she said she could get another one in town."

Sam Foster grinned. "Well, I'll be . . ." He paused, then wheeled to the doorway. "Hey, Timmie, boy, put up that puzzle and come to supper. Don't you know this is Christmas Eve, boy? There'll be no red wagon for boys who don't go to bed when they should."

Country
Christmas

TED KEYES almost laughed out loud at the bitter reaction of the other passengers when the driver told them the big bus was stranded in the small mountain community of Hillside.

Ted didn't care about the delay. He wasn't "going home" for Christmas as most of his fellow passengers were. He was going to King City to take a new job, and he had a week to get there.

He followed the others as they filed out of the bus and ran the short distance into the general store, eager to escape the fury of the winter storm as quickly as possible.

Senior Group

They gathered about the pot-bellied stove, quiet, oblivious of one another, each wrapped in his own unhappy thoughts.

A big man, elderly, yet straight as a ramrod, entered from a back room.

Ted didn't care that the bus was delayed.

"Welcome, folks, welcome. Nice to have so much company on Christmas Eve. Ma's putting on the big coffee pot and making some hot chocolate for the kiddies. Don't go reaching for your wallets. This'll be compliments of Ben Flowers, who wishes you one and all a Merry Christmas. If any of you want to make phone calls, reversing the charges, of course, phone's out there in the kitchen. Now, just make yourself to home."

There was a mad rush toward the kitchen. Ted found himself an unoccupied chair near the stove and relaxed.

He was suddenly conscious of the fact that Ben Flowers was shoveling more coal into the stove and that the noise had awakened him. Two youngsters were sleeping on a pallet in one corner. An old man puffed on his pipe and sat opposite of Ted's stove. No one else was in sight.

"Where is everyone?"

"Gone to church. Little mission up the road. Minister came down and issued invitations to a special service. Tried to wake you, but you're a sound sleeper, son. In fact, I had to slam this stove door five or six times to wake you."

"Why?"

"Just thought you might give me a hand. I ain't as young as I used to be, I found that out. Come along, will you?"

The Tree

Ted followed the man through the kitchen. The old man pointed to a Christmas tree resting against the back porch.

"Cut that tree and brought it down from the hill. Tucked me out, for sure. Help me get it in, will you?"

"You're putting up a tree on Christmas morning?"

"Yes, first one in several years. Me and ma sorta got out of the habit, son, not having any folks or any youngsters about. Now, this stovepot that is such a bother to you is a real occasion for us. We just gotta have a tree, son, and that's all there is to it."

Like Christmas

After that, it was just like Christmas. Ted and Ben Flowers finished the tree, then retired to the kitchen to drink coffee and watch Mrs. Flowers prepare a Christmas meal—turkey, dressing, cranberries, all the things Ted remembered as his childhood days.

The church-goers returned to find that Mrs. Flowers had wrapped a small gift for each one—actually two gifts were left over, because she had erred in her count of those in attendance. No one seemed to notice.

It was an unusual Christmas dinner—served in the early morning, on paper plates. Ted always remembered how everyone had eaten heartily and had happily said goodbye to the old couple at the country store. Someday soon he would write the Fosters and tell them that they'd made quite a scene in King City when the bus roared into town with all of the passengers singing Christmas Carols and shouting "Merry Christmas" to everyone in sight.

THE SODALITY

The Sodality — A Way of Love

"The Sodality is a way of love" — the way of life is a way of loving — loving Christ and Mary and being loved by them. First, we come to know Christ and Mary better at our Sodality meetings through our talks and discussions. Our reading and meditations have helped us to become acquainted with Jesus and His Mother. Also the different committees encourage us more. For example: The Eucharistic Committee has to do with Jesus, going to mass and receiving the Lord in the Blessed Sacrament.

A good Sodalist should go to an extra mass during the week besides Sunday. There are a few other committees — Marian — our Ladies Committee, Apostolic, Publicity and Social Committees. The Big Six Rules, help us also. Good Sodalists keep the Big Six and receive many graces. There are many rules but we learn six: Rule 1, 32, 33, 34, 40 and 43. Keeping of the Big Six Rules keeps us in harmony with the angels and saints in heaven, and helps us to work joyfully for and with those around us. The Sodality is our way of life and love. The Sodality way of love is the beginning of Heaven. Heaven is loving and being loved.

Our Blessed Mother, we are 'her Sodalists'. She loves us and helps us to love her son, Jesus Christ.

Chairman of the Publicity Committee, Mary Lopatynski.

Industrial Comm'ttee Is Formed

Gary Gall, Area Co-ordinator of the Department of Industry of Ottawa, addressing a meeting of Crows Nest Pass persons, pointed out the need for an Industrial Development Committee to serve the entire Crows Nest Pass area.

Mr. Gall outlined the procedure necessary to go about attracting industry to this area and he emphasized the importance of preparing and having ready a brief on the Pass area.

The brief he stressed should outline in detail all facilities and services available in the area as well as lands available for industry and costs.

Mr. Gall strongly recommended that no time be lost in forming a new Industrial Development Committee to serve the district, and he added he would be pleased to return to the Pass to address another meeting.

Jack Colwell was elected president of the Coleman Athletic Association at a meeting held in the arena on December 15th.

Mr. Colwell replaces Rev. Denis Fleming who left town last month for Calgary, where he was transferred to take over a new parish.

The recently elected slate of officers to assist Mr. Colwell in his duties are:

Secy.-treasurer, Jack Root. Vice-president, Trevor Collister. Kitchen convener, Mrs. Helen Nedd, and Gae's committee will be Doreen Colwell and Farina Langille.

To raise funds for the promotion of minor hockey in Coleman, the Athletic Association is planning on setting up a community Christmas card where local residents can have their names placed on the card by making a contribution to the fund.

The committee has announced that there is an urgent need of coaches to assist in the pee wee mighty mites hockey groups, and persons interested in lending assistance will be welcomed.

Library Suggests Christmas Gift Memberships

The Coleman Community Library board held a meeting December 8th when it was decided to close the library during the Christmas week which will see the library closed on December 24th and December 31st.

The board has pointed out that books taken out on December 10 should be returned on December 17 and either re-registered or exchanged for other volumes.

The members may borrow an extra two books or a total of four books during the holidays, but these must be returned by January 7.

In an effort to increase membership in the library, the committee have suggested that residents consider giving out library memberships as Christmas gifts to friends and relatives.

1964 N. E. S. Roundup

During 1964 many changes have come to the area serviced by the Blairmore National Employment Service which encompasses the Crows Nest Pass and Fernie District.

These hardy people are well aware of the time cost was King, as the Crows Nest Pass was its prosperous domain. The fall of this kingdom resulted in abandoned mine workings, unemployment, disrepair and hardship became a daily diet.

They had suffered tragedy many times before and did not intend to take their defeat without fighting back. Industry of the area and the workers rallied to the need. They explored every avenue and took advantage of every opportunity. The coal industry fought for, and obtained, markets for their coal. The lumber and tourist industries have matured and are prosperous again.

Faith in the economic future of the area is evidenced by the present trend of expansion. The "Pass" is no longer experiencing a phenomenal boom but has gradually recovered from the disasters of earlier years.

Understanding and co-operation from all levels of government during the past year has given the Crows Nest Pass a new and encouraging outlook. As a result, Phillis & Electric Co. Ltd. are building a $1,500,000 plant at Coleman, Alberta, which will manufacture telecommunications cable and will hire approximately 75 employees.

A review of the National Employment Service employment picture during the past year has reflected many improvements. During the month of October, 1964, statistics indicated 91 male applicants were unemployed as compared to 243 during the same period in 1963. However, regardless of a reasonably buoyant employment condition in the area and government assisted programs to stimulate employment, the full support of employers and householders alike is needed to plan for additional employment during the winter months when unemployment is normally higher than the remainder of the year.

Despite some measure of success it is important we plan intelligently to ensure high employment at adequate wages if good working conditions are to be fostered everywhere.

Your Blairmore National Employment Service wishes, at this time, to take the opportunity to wish all our friends and business associates a Very Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Letter to the Editor

1712 Donnelly Ave., Victoria, B. C., Dec. 2, 1964.

Mr. Thomas Holstead,

The Journal, Coleman, Alberta.

Dear Tom:

Again it is time for me to renew my subscription to The Journal and I am enclosing a money order in payment.

It is interesting to follow the activities of the town and Pass through the columns of your paper. It certainly is encouraging to learn of the continued prosperity there, and with the establishment of new sources of revenue. It will assist in the economy of the town.

Our rainy season is now on us, but it keeps the grass green all winter and flowers continue to bloom with such mild weather.

Our very best wishes to you.

Very sincerely,

Frank H. Graham.
